++ Valid for broadcast between 0600 and 1800

Headline:
Cold with fresh easterly winds and further snow showers. Icy.

Today:
Cold with rather gusty brisk northeasterly winds, these will continue to bring frequent sleet and snow showers off the North Sea. Further accumulations are likely. Some brighter interludes. Maximum temperature 3 deg C (37 deg F).

Tonight:
Bitterly cold with a fresh and gusty northeasterly breeze. Further showers of sleet and snow overnight. Rather icy on untreated surfaces, with snow accumulating even to low levels. Minimum temperature -4 deg C (25 deg F).

Monday:
Another day of snow showers and strong northeasterly winds. Further accumulations of snow are likely, even to lower levels. Remaining cold or bitterly cold, with overnight frost and ice. Maximum temperature 1 deg C (34 deg F).

Outlook for Tuesday to Thursday:
Snow showers will continue, leading to further snow accumulations and icy stretches. Remaining bitterly cold, but with some winter sunshine at times. Winds remaining brisk, with severe overnight frosts.
